Patricia A. Goodman Dean, Institutional Research, Planning and Effectiveness

Patricia Goodman joined Gateway Community and Technical College in November 2006 as the dean of Institutional Research, Planning and Effectiveness. Previously, Goodman served in various roles at Big Sandy Community and Technical College, where she worked from July 1997 until October 2006. These roles included assistant professor and program coordinator of Information Technology, PeopleSoft training specialist/assistant professor, coordinator of institutional research, and director of institutional effectiveness.

Goodman is a doctoral candidate in community college leadership at Walden University. She holds an MBA with a concentration in computer information systems from Morehead State University, a bachelor of science degree in business administration/accounting from Sullivan University, and an associate in applied science degree in business management from Prestonsburg Community College. She has been inducted into the Delta Mu Delta National Honor Society in business administration, and the Kappa Delta Pi International Honor Society in education.

Goodman is a graduate of various leadership programs, including Leadership East Kentucky, KCTCS President's Leadership Seminar, and the American Association of Community Colleges' Future Leaders Institute. She was the 2008 recipient of the KCTCS New Horizons Administrative Staff Award and the NISOD Award of Excellence.

Goodman currently serves on the advisory board for the Kentucky Campus Compact, is a member of the Northern Kentucky Civic Contribution Committee, Legacy Leadership of Northern Kentucky/Greater Cincinnati, the Kentucky Association for Institutional Research, and is immediate-past president of the executive board of the Southeastern Association for Community College Research.
